THE LATE LORD SHAFTESBURY.

On the afternoon of the 1st of October, 1885, passed away that most eminent social reformer of the present century, Anthony Ashley Cooper, Earl of Shaftesbury, aged 84 years and five months. He died at Folkestone, England, in the presence of several members of his family, and his last moments are reported to have been of the most peaceful character.

As the late Lord Shaftesbury had acquired a world-wide fame as a philanthropist, it is our duty as journalists to make more than a passing notice of the deceased. To quote from the London Times:—

"He is the most conspicuous recent instance of a man who, born to great station and ample fortune, has deliberately devoted a long life neither to pleasure, nor to personal advancement, nor to political power, but to furthering the material, moral, and religious well-being of his countrymen. The tenacity, indeed, with which he held to his rather narrow theological opinions, and the excessive asperity with which he sometimes spoke of those who differed from him, tended to limit the number of those who were in complete sympathy with him. But in the main this narrowness was easily forgiven, when men regarded his life as a whole, and considered how great and how real had been his practical services. Though he was perhaps not quite so prominent a figure of late as he had been twenty or thirty years ago, LORD SHAFTESBURY worked almost to the end, and may be said to have died in harness. His health had long been feeble, but he continued to do what he could—and it was not a little—to further the philanthropic and religious objects to which his life had been devoted. It is no more than eighteen months since he delivered in the House of Lords the remarkable speech which contributed so much to the issuing of the Royal Commission on the Housing of the Poor. He was active till quite lately in the work of the Lunacy Commissioners, of whom he was the chief. Through last season he still attended, though, of course, not so regularly as of old, the meetings of the innumerable societies of which he was president or vice-president. Moreover, the number of more private demands upon his time for benevolent purposes was endless; and some of these were of the most exhausting kind. Till the very end he would not give up the chance of doing what he believed to be useful work. At last, at the age of 84, he has succumbed to the complication of maladies from which he was long a sufferer. He will be deeply and widely mourned. It is fitting that, to a man who did so much for his fellow-men as Lord Shaftesbury did, and who filled so large a place in the life of his time, the highest funeral honors should be paid, and we are glad to learn that these have been already offered by the Dean of Westminster. Among the hundreds of illustrious dead who lie in that hallowed resting-place."

The life of this man might be emulated by many on these Islands with beneficial results both to the native and foreign populations. He was a practical philanthropist and a religious man. His main efforts were to raise the condition, especially the moral condition of the poorest of the poor, at the same time he succeeded in effecting an immense sanitary reform. He possessed a boundless energy and the list of his good works is innumerable. His death is looked upon as a national loss, and, in respect to the religious and philanthropic societies of London, truly irreparable.

NO MISREPRESENTATION.

On the morning of the King's birthday the Advertiser devoted over two columns of space to an alleged exposure of the "misrepresentations of the BULLETIN," respecting the Honolulu Rowing and Yachting Association. The force of the "exposure" may be judged from the fact that the BULLETIN is made responsible for the utterances of members of different clubs and of the Association itself, faithfully reported in this paper. We cannot reply to that style of attack. However, the main charge against this paper is that its criticisms of the Association were suggested by one particular member of the Myrtle Boat Club, also a member of the Association, when a certain member of another club and of the Association had volunteered to post us in all matters relative to the transactions of that organization. As to this complaint, it is enough to say that we claim the right to choose our sources of information. Yet we may add that our contemporary is altogether astray as to where our facts were obtained. The gentleman who has become the cynosure of its displeasure only had his views presented once or twice in the controversy, and then in the course of interviews had by a reporter with boating men of several organizations. It is very irregular to subject a paper to attack for giving, as matter of news, the sentiments of persons not connected with it. Even worse than that is for the Advertiser to blame this paper for taking one man as a guide in a discussion, and then itself take another man as its own supreme authority in the case. Its article of Monday bears internal evidence of inspiration by a gentleman who has had more or less part in the doings of the Association to which we have taken exception. The editor lends himself to an uncalled-for attack upon a gentleman of whom he has no personal knowledge, without deigning to discuss that gentleman's views upon matters in dispute upon their merits. We have nothing to withdraw respecting the acts done in the name of the Association, as we have as much confidence in our own sources of information as any that have been prescribed to us. Some members of the Association, we believe, have taken offense at our criticisms, who are themselves unaware of certain unworthy transactions purporting to have been authorized by that organization. For instance, members of the Honolulu Club were approached with proposals to organize a "dummy" crew to row against the Iolani six-oared crew, after the Myrtle and Kapiolani Clubs had withdrawn from the Association. This attempt to fool the public with a bogus race, in the leading event of the regatta, surely could not have been part of the "affairs of the Association" conducted squarely and above-board, as the Advertiser boasts. Our contemporary, in its misguided zeal, has laid itself open to a charge of misrepresentation. When it says a certain delegate from the Myrtle Club to the Association was in favor of rowing for money, it commits the offense that it vainly tries to bring home to this paper. The gentleman referred to, according to a statement he has made to us, simply contended that money prizes should not be absolutely forbidden, because circumstances would probably arise where it would be difficult to secure races for trophies. Another contention of the same delegate, against separate stake boats, has proved by the events of the regatta to have been not so unreasonable as had been so hastily assumed by his colleagues of less boating experience in our channel. However, Mr. Wundenberg is doubtless able to take care of himself, if he only thinks worth while replying to the unseemly attack made upon him.

By request we publish in this issue the correspondence between the United States Secretary of the Treasury and Prof. Agassiz, containing an offer to the latter and his declining of the position of superintendent of the coast and geodetic survey. Those who listened with pleasure to the professor's lecture on coral reefs, in Honolulu last year, will be pleased to notice the distinguished recognition of his scientific standing by the United States Government, and cannot but admire the eminent modesty and unselfishness of his letter declining the very important office proffered him.

POST OFFICE ACCOMMODATION.

EDITOR BULLETIN:—While the Hon. S. G. Wilder was Minister of the Interior, he had occasion to notify the Postmaster General "that the Postal Department of this Kingdom was intended to accommodate the people." I wonder, were he now in office, what he would say. It is true the changes made in the Post Office in this city since then have been many, but are the people accommodated as is their right? When complaint, long and loud, was made that the building put up by Mr. W. R. Castle was detrimental to the public, the space being requisite for Post Office accommodations, the owners were induced to remove it, and then a window was set apart for ladies, a stand was made at the window, which was used a few days and then—pau.

Now one window suffices for the sale of stamps, registry of letters, general delivery of Portuguese and other foreign letters, weighing and stamping letters and papers, receiving applications for postal orders, and paying the same, and all general business, and why is this? One side of the building is clear—the Waikiki side; the Ewa side has a window for newspapers to be dropped in when it is open. One window is used for the delivery of native letters, and the whole front is taken up with private boxes for which a certain sum per month is charged. Could a light shed not be built on the side of the Post Office for the accommodation of the people, and one window be used for ladies, one for the sale of stamps? Could the native and Portuguese delivery not be at the same window? Could the "newspaper drop" not be brought a little nearer town? Could not news dealers be supplied with stamps at a discount, which is the rule elsewhere, as then they could enable people who cannot procure stamps at the Post Office, for various reasons, to stamp their letters and mail them. Why should it take from two to three days to assort the mail, which it does, frequently? There are a number of young, honest men who could be hired, to assist in assorting the mails, and they would be benefited, and the business of the office expedited at a very small cost.

The benefits 90 percent of the people of these Islands derive from being in the "Postal Union" are great, (?) particularly that with Africa! I, no doubt, will incur the displeasure of some, in the foregoing, but have I not stated facts? And is the cause of complaint not justifiable? And, last but not least, will any change be made? I do not think so. I shall probably recur to this again.

PRO BONO PUBLICO.
